Hello, my friends!

“Angels we have heard on high. . .“

I always enjoy the Christmas season! People are fired up about being a Christian. I dig that! I enjoy the Christmas story with the beautiful image of choirs of angels lighting up the night sky, singing to shepherds!

Angels seem to be such wonderful creatures.

I have my share of Angels. “Mr. Tim, Mr TIM, MR. TIM!!” Imagine someone yelling at you from less than two feet away.

“Yes, Angel.” I responded calmly.

“I need HELP, Mr. Tim!!”

“Yes, I know Angel, just like you needed help on the last twenty-seven problems.”

We settle into a routine of getting out the dry erase board, writing down the problem and solving it. Suddenly, “WEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEE!!!!” A squeal that sounded exactly like a little girl getting her pigtail pulled. I looked over at Angel. “DUDE, enough with the squealing like a chick!”

“Sorry, Mr. Tim.”

The days that followed were equally loud. It wasn’t long before Angel had a question. “Mr. Tim can you give me a mechanical pencil?”

“Pencil, eh? Tell you what. You don’t squeal and yell tomorrow and I’ll give you TWO.”

The next day came quickly. Angel was his usual extra loud self. Here came the question.

“Mr. Tim, can you give me a mechanical pencil?”

“Sorry, bro. You were too loud again!”

The next day there were changes. He actually went without screaming! Jesse took him to our storage closet and gave him several pencils.

Later that week, after we had finished at the mission, Jesse and I were headed to the car.

Angel ran up beside me. “Where ya goin’ Mr. Tim?”

“Headed for my next assignment, Angel.”

“I love you, Mr. Tim.”

“Love you, too, Angel.”

“I wish I could live with you.”

“Dude, I don’t think your parents would dig that. I’ll see you tomorrow.”

Perhaps modern day Angels still come bearing gifts.

We love you guys SO much! MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL!!
