

Letters from the Mission Field

NOVEMBER 2014

It's been ten years since Dad and I took our last daddy daughter trip. For my sixteenth birthday we took a trip to New York, now for my twenty-sixth birthday we're traveling to Derby, England.

Unfortunately we weren't able to get a flight over together so there was some things I had to learn on my own.

When I got to Amsterdam, I had to figure out how to print out my boarding pass and transfer to the correct gate. Not too hard but a little stressful when after a few tries my passport still wasn't scanning.

After carefully watching other people go through the process I figured out how to manually input the numbers and soon I met Dad in Birmingham, England.

We took a beautiful train ride through the countryside while enjoying tea with milk and spotting fox, sheep and dairy cows out in the lush, green landscape.

A few hours later we were with our friends, the Jacquins, enjoying Indian curry.

To make the day even better Kat, the mom, took me out for an authentic English "hack" or horse ride through the countryside.

Dad and I enjoyed every minute of our time in England, but there's nothing like being back home with family.

The next day at the mission I sat at the folding table with Gisselle when a timid, Latino mother with a baby on her hip stood in the doorway. "Hola Señora!" I said to her and invited her in.

She sat next to me and in very fast Spanish explained to me she wanted to come to English class. In my very slow Spanish I enthusiastically I invited her to my class on Tuesday. I'm really looking forward to starting class again and I've been excitedly planning my lesson for tomorrow. Please be praying Kelli and her daughter Camille.

This Saturday We're mobilizing 100 people from One Heart Church. We'll be in ten apartment complexes witnessing to over 300 people. This has been one of the first church outreaches that I've planned on my own and I'm excited to see the results.

Thank you for keeping us in your prayers. Please continue to pray that God will be at work in our community, especially this Saturday!

Horse riding has always been a passion of mine. There's something so freeing about taking off on a fast horse, with the cool wind in your face and the open countryside in front of you. This experience will be one of my top five moments in my life.
