Letters from the Mission Field April 2017

Hello friends!

The other night we had our friends over for dinner. After a delicious barbecue super the conversation turned religious.

“It’s so hard to love on this certain person. Day in an out they annoy me so much!” The husband was saying, “ But I guess what being a Christain means is to love our enemies.” Way easier said than done.

“You know I think we should make a pack right now that the four of us make a dedicated effort to love on those people that drive us crazy. To try to mend those broken relationships, to pass on the love.” I said.

“Yes! A love ripple.” The wife said. “I’m willing to give it a try.”

So it’s begun. Our love ripple. And I’m spreading it to you now. WOW! You look awesome today!

I couldn’t think of a person I have any animosity towards so I’ve just tried to love louder and let that love ripple in the community.

I started with snacks for the mission kids. Giving each child a treat and an honest, sincere compliment on their way out the door.

At the drive through I paid for the person behind me. I wrote cheerful handwritten notes. I sent text to my friends saying I’m thinking about them.

Immediately I got three texts back saying how much that meant to them at that exact moment. Each of them gave me serious prayer requests and I was able to lift them up and pray for them specifically. Two of those friends are non-believers and I know this brought us closer and will lead to more important conversations.

THINGS

THANK YOU FOR SENDING JESUS TO DIE
ON THE CROSS TO TAKE AWAY THOSE SINS.
