

Letters from the Mission Field March 2017

Miles and I are here on Skidaway Island enjoying time with our friends from Skidaway Island Baptist Church. Two things have happened so far.

I got to see some prayer partners who have come up to serve with us in Atlanta.

The wife was talking about how she missed her daughter who had just moved to Louisiana. But that she was looking forward to visiting her because they were going to see the life size ark that's just been built.

"It's supposed to be just like Noah's." The woman exclaims.

"That sounds really neat. You know a Sunday School teacher once asked a little boy, 'do you think Noah went fishing while he was on the ark?' to which the boy replied, 'how could he? He only had two worms!'"

The wife cracks up and we continue to talk about my ministry in Atlanta.

Later that night, I'm teaching the students about Works religions, where people have to do things to take away their own sin, and Grace religion, where Jesus has done all the work for us.

I teach more on the subject of grace and forgiveness.

Then we enjoy singing songs from Kenya and they listen to my stories about the man who wanted to sell us a giant snake from his backpack in Madagascar.

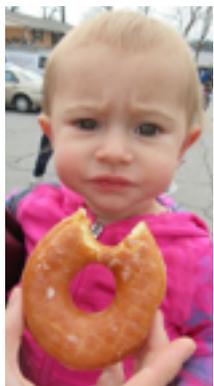

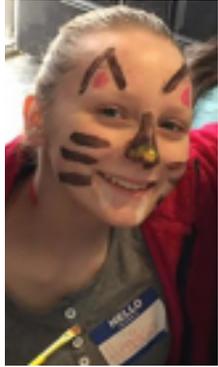

Towards the end though, the children are running wild with energy and I don't know if anything I've taught has stuck. When all the sudden one boy accidentally kicks another boy in the head. The first boy is so upset, "You hit me on purpose!" He's about to cry when his older sister comes over, comforts him and says, "Peter, have some grace, he didn't mean too."

I guess they were listening!

I've also had a great time teaching the salvation bracelet to my Azalea girls. Please be praying for their spiritual growth.
