

Have you even seen those glow sticks that you give to kids? They crack them and then out shines the light? I used to love getting these at the Stone Mountain laser show.

One of my friends from church told me the story about her family vacation to Disney world. Her son had just been handed a brand new glow stick and he asked, "How does it work?!"

His sister told him, "You have to break it for it to work!"

Right then the mom realized God was speaking to her. Sometimes He breaks us open to make us work and to work in and through us.

I have a few trials I'm going through and I believe God is using these to bring me to a place of brokenness so that I seek Him alone. Then He will bless me.

I'm sure many of you can relate to my trial: finances. When Penelope was delivered her arm had to be broken so she could fit through the birth canal. This led to an extended stay in the NICU which led to $8645 dollars in medical bills. Money, money, money! Now bill collectors are constantly calling and it's become overwhelming.

I'm now giving all that stress and anxiety over to You Father. I'm down on my knees and I cry out for relief. I'm realizing just how dependent I am on You Lord.

I believe that God is using this as an opportunity for His good!

Instead of sitting around in frustration I've been picking up the phone and trying to sign up teams to serve with us for the week of June 6-9.

After about ten no's from various churches I was feeling pretty deflated. And that's when God stepped in. Today I got a call from a team in Wetumpka, Alabama. Guess what week they want to come serve? AMEN!

Please keep on praying that God will continue to send more labors specifically for July 18-22.

Penelope continues to get better and better! She makes me such a happy mother. She's now sitting up on her own and rolling over like a champ! I've enjoyed taking her to my Bible studies. She loves to sit on my lap and watch the teachers. She's already thirsty for knowledge and God's Word!

Miles and I owe $8654 in medical bills for Penelope. Her week long stay in the NICU really hit our budget hard. We are paying as much as we can each month, but the bill collectors have started to call. It's been very depressing for me. Please pray that the evil one won't use this against us and that the Father will raise up many generous donors!
